Copyrights

This story has been 100 % written by Malinda Dollack in 2016, and inspired by Holy Spirit. In 2026, Chat GPT helped in assisting with art. Malinda Dollack 100% described the art needed, down to every flower, colour, animal, text etc. Chat GPT then would produce a picture then it would be edited over and over again, sometimes taking days on a picture until the correct pictures formed.

I give permission to all people to use this story to be performed as a Christmas Play and it may be altered in anyway needed.

Dedication

I dedicate this book to my Father God,
Jesus, who is my Shepherd, and Holy Spirit who related His story of Jesus's Birth, told through the eyes of Sarah,
the three-week-old baby sheep, who was there and witnessed this Glorious Event!

Without Holy Spirit this story could never be told.

I thank You all for this amazing story.

Kwa,
you can't catch me!

Sarah

Froggy

I snuggled into the bend of Mama's arm.

We lay in a field near Bethlehem.

"My name is Sarah. I am three-weeks old, the youngest of our flock. I am a black and white Awassi Lamb and look just like Mama. I am still young enough to be allowed the luxury of Mama's warmth. I use her tummy as my pillow. My older siblings cuddle together, snoring happily." I bleet.

Caleb's hooves brush Amos's ear and his face twitches.

I begin to giggle.

"Now, Now Sarah,
settle down. Be a good girl and go to sleep."

Mama bleets.

Today Nathan had missed catching Mr. Frog.
Jumping over a pile of stones, he fell down a steep hill.

"Baa, Baa, I'll get you next time."

He bleeted.

He fumbled, leg after legs looking like a baby trying to get their hoofing.

We had laughed until our chops hurt.

All Nathan had hurt was his pride.

Mr. Frog hopped merrily away croaking,

"Kwa, you can't catch me"

Mr. Frog spoke fluent Hebrew.
